- * Our initial actions were
  - to call for a centralized hotline at the national/EU level;
  - to provide community-building and peer-to-peer psycho-social support during lockdown.
- * Started in March 2020 with an ad hoc survey documenting hate crimes during the Covid-19 pandamic
- → included in the report of Corona en discriminatiemeldingen in Nederland, 'Corona and discrimination in the Netherlands'.
- * Our main goal is to facilitate communication and dialogue on the subject of anti-Asian racism (AAR) as well as to promote cultural diversity in Europe.
- ★ We consult with the European Commission on the EU National Action Plans on Anti-Racism 2020–2025 and 2026 onward.

Debates on migration, racism, and integration

In 2018, Björn Höcke (Alternative für Deutschland/AfD, DE) was reported to use the term, großangelegtes Remigrationsprojekt, 'large-scale remigration project' in his circle.

When I hear the phrase "Asians are next in line to be White," I replace the word "White" with "disappear." Asians are next in line to disappear. We are reputed to be so accomplished, and so law-abiding, we will disappear into this country's amnesiac fog. We will not be the power but become absorbed by power, [...] we're often listed as "Other" in polls and why we're hard to find in racial breakdowns on reported rape or workplace discrimination or domestic abuse. #### EU's National Action Plan against Racism

The National Action Plan against Racism (NAPAR) 2020–2025 was adopted in response to structural racism as the first comprehensive action plan at the EU level.

Structural racism persists in our societies. Discrimination on the basis of race or ethnic origin – as well as religion or belief – remains widespread, as shown in numerous reports. [...] It is not enough to be against racism. We need to talk about racism. We have to be active against it. (European Commission 2020b: 1,16, 19)

Goals of NAPAR

The fight against racism must be mainstreamed: racism and racial discrimination must be tackled at all levels of governance, and across all policies.

(European Commission 2020a: 18)

- * Promote anti-discrimination, equality, diversity, and pluralism.
- * Address the history of colonization and structural racism.
- Law enforcement (e.g., racial profiling, excessive force), employment, housing, education, healthcare care.

Key Components of NAPAR

Based on the Guiding Principles by European Commission (2022), tackling racism should be approached through the following sectors:

EU legal framework

Fair policing and protection

Diversity in the EU

Anti-Asian Racism in EU

- * AAR has had a long but largely undocumented history in Europe and was not even officially recognized as a distinct category of racism by the EU, either at the EU level until July 2022 (European Commission 2020a,b, Asian Voices Europe 2024).
- * No specific unit, coordinator or dedicated strategy framework for AAR at the EU level or national level as of now.

In the year 2020, the number of migrants from Asia to Europe was around 23 million (McAuliffe, M. and L.A. Oucho 2024).

U. Leipzig, AVE

Anti-Asian Racism in NAPAR

- * EU-level surveys or data collection on AAR are either nonexistent or scarce.
- (e.g., European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, European Values Study (EVS), European Social Survey (ESS), Eurobarometer)
- * Engagement with civil society organizations is not adequately facilitated.

Figure 4: FRA's Survey on Minorities and Discrimination in EU - (South-)Asian Group

U. Leipzig, AVE

In Germany, the recent action plan against racism in November 2023 has finally recognized the AAR:

[...] Anti-Asian racism (AAR) existed in Germany before COVID-19; among the worst outbreaks of anti-Asian violence since 1945 have been the racist riots in Hoyerswerda in 1991 and in the Lichtenhagen district of Rostock in 1992. [...] Little is known as yet about the extent to which Asian [diaspora] are subject to structural racism, as there are scarcely any relevant studies.

(Federal Government Commissioner for Anti-Racism 2023: 39)

 As of 31 December 2024, among the foreign-born population (Ausländerinnen und Ausländer) in Berlin, 26.4% held an Asian nationality (brandenburg 2024).

A Long But Undocumented History of AAR in Europe

* While AAR has become more visible to Whites* since the Covid-19 pandemic, colonial biases and stereotypical portraits of Asian diasporas living in Europe have predated a long ago

(Yeh 2020, Roberto et al. 2020, Chen and Wu 2021, Köhler and Suda 2023, Mai 2020, Suda et al. 2020).

- * Asians in Europe face a form of racism that manifests in seemingly paradoxical ways.
  - * See Painter (2020, 2011) for the capitalized use of White. The term 'White' is employed to denote an identity-political and cultural-constructivist category that encompasses a broad range of experiences and historical contexts.

Being yellow

- Modern European colonialism institutionalized racism as a system of governance, the rule of colonial difference (Chatterjee 1993), which justified economic and political domination by construing colonized peoples as biologically and culturally inferior (Go 2004, Stoler 1992).
- * European perceptions of East Asians evolved from 'white' to 'yellow' and 'Mongoloid', and southeast- and south Asian to '(reddish-)brown (Keel 2017).
- * Such imagery cast Asians as both hyper-foreign and colonial legacies still shape contemporary racial hierarchies and anti-Asian discourse.

Yellow peril

* The term 'Yellow Peril', since the 1890s, depicted Asians as villains or as undesirable members of society, who may pose existential threats (Keevak 2011).

"Völker Europas, wahret eure heiligsten Güter!" "Peoples of Europe, preserve your most sacred goods!"

Colonial legacies

- * European colonialism in Asia, driven by imperialist countries such as Britain, France, Germany, The Netherlands, Spain, and Portugal invaded and colonized vast Asian nations through the use of military force, land acquisition, enslavement, exploitation of human and economic resources, and the imposition of political domination (Chatterjee and Eaton (2006), a.o.).
- Britain exploited vast colonies including India, the Middle East (including present-day Oman, Yemen, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Iraq, Jordan, Palestine), and Southeast Asia (Myanmar (Burma), Sri Lanka (Ceylon), the Maldives, Singapore, Malaysia (Malaya), Brunei, Sarawak, and North Borneo, and Hong Kong) (Johnson 2003, Veevers 2020, Marshall 2001, Keller 2001, Fieldhouse 2006). France stretched its colonization to Zhanjiang in China, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia (then called French Indochina) (Hale 2008, Daughton 2006, Brocheux and Hémery 2011), While The Netherlands built their imperialism through the Indian Ocean trade routes, especially Indonesia (Aryodiguno 2020, Oostindie and Paasman 1998, Laarman 2013), Germany colonized Jiaozhou in China as well as in the Pacific islands (Knoll and Hiery 2010, Mueller 2022, Conrad 2011), Portugal, once invaded India and Southeast Asia, colonized Goa, Macau, and East Timor until the mid-20th century (Anderson 1962, Feldman-Bianco 2001). Spain engaged in colonization, extending invasion to areas such as what is now the Philippines, and northern Taiwan (Boxer 2022, Schmidt-Nowara 4 D > 4 A > 4 B > 4 B > 2008).

Model minority myth

* Asians continue to be assigned to the 'model minority myth', which is used to stereotype Asians, who are considered to be financially successful, hard working and socially well-assimilated in White culture.

(Toupin and Son 1991, Daniels and Kitano 1988, Hsia 1988, Takagi 1992, Wei 2010, Hartlep and Bui 2020).

The children of immigrants from Vietnam stand out with their brilliant school grades. Their success refutes clichés in the integration debate (Spiewak 2009).

Racialization hegenomy

* This dual portrayal, encompassing both the 'Yellow Peril' and 'model minority' myths, draws from orientalist narratives deeply rooted in Europe's (post-)colonial history

(Cho 2021, Hasunuma 2020, Kawai 2005, Shim 1998, Li and Nicholson Jr 2021).

* These narratives, acting as instruments of hegemony, reinforce simplistic stereotypes and overlook varied experiences of Asians in Europe (De Cook and Yoon 2021, Yeh 2014, De Leon 2020).

Physical assault

Physical assault

(1) It was Christmas Eve in 2022, around 13:00 in the afternoon. I was walking my dog in a residential area in Duisburg. Suddenly, two men approached me. They looked straight at me and started shouting, calling me a disgusting Chinese and saying they would kill every Chinese. Before I could react, one of them punched me in the face. I stumbled, trying to protect my dog. My head and left eye were injured. I screamed for help, and some people nearby called the police. The two men ran away before the police arrived. They were never caught.

Instituational racism

(2) When I told my daughter's kindergarten about racist remarks other children made toward her, they suggested we find another school where there are more Asians. [...] On the street, people sometimes shout Hey Corona or Ching chong at us. My daughter doesn't yet understand what those words mean, but I worry for the day she does.

Racialized Queerness

Queer spaces in Europe are created predominantly White circles, which were deeply ingrained in systematic racial biases and the subsequent exclusion of racial minorities from queer communities have enforced discriminatory practices against people of color (Monro 2020, Knoll and Hiery 1983, Ghaziani 2021, Walcott 2007).

(3) I've thought for a long time why I was never active in queer groups in Europe. There are plenty of youth groups and clubs for queers, but I realized that they are predominantly whites, and I didn't feel like I belonged as I often received racial slurs there [...] I've come to understand that it means a lot to me to identify as non-White individuals in a White society, especially in terms of our queerness. - 20s, NBGD, in Germany (Gang 2023)

Impacts of racial discrimination

The cumulative effect of such seemingly minor, insidious acts can lead to significant psychological and emotional distress for those targeted.

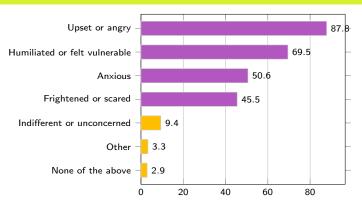

Figure 20: In general, how did you feel when you were harassed? Select all that apply.

Existential Impact of Racial Prejudice

Confronted with constant marginalization, individuals may internalize these biases, leading to self-blame. In an effort to assimilate into predominantly White societies, they may suppress their identities and conform to Western cultural norms, perpetuating feelings of invisibility and exclusion.

(4) Reflecting on my background as the child of Vietnamese guest workers, [...] I wasn't even conscious of it, or of how I had internalized racism to the extent that I now understand. [...] I always avoided (asian) community events and any contact with Asian-looking people to deny my origins and blend in with White people. I even longed for a German name and resented my parents for not being German. [It was a result of] what I learned from my surroundings and society - this persistent desire to fit in the White society. [...] When I realized early that I looked different from my peers, I was frustrated [...] You had to prove your worth], so to speak. [...] The confirmation that my value is solely tied to my productivity has always forced me to justify my existence, especially under such princely guilt. - 30s, NBGD, Germany (Gang 2023)

Normalization of embodied racism

Microaggressions are not abstract offenses but embodied racialized experiences that influence how individuals repeatedly perceive themselves and navigate their identities and senses of belonging (Park et al. 2024; Lee et al. and):

- * The persistence of racial discrimination reinforces new form of racism and social dominance.
  - "[R]ather, racialized identities embedded in other salient social categories such as migration status, religion, or cultural heritage" (Juang et al. 2021:186).
- The systematic denial of AAR disrupts inclusive societal structures by positioning Asian individuals as outsiders to the discourse on racism. They are not recognized as equal participants in this social dialogue, and their voices are often dismissed or minimized.
- * Systematic denial of racism acts as a strategic adaptation that enables exclusionary practices to continue in seemingly less discriminatory ways (Bonilla-Silva 2015).

Neo-racism

- * Scholars of racism have highlighted the ambivalences of antiracism, arguing that it can sometimes serve as a strategy to immunize racism from criticism, thereby contributing to its perpetuation (Kim and Steinhilper 2025).
- It may turn out as a neo-racism where traditional racial hierarchies are recast as narratives of incompatibility, maintaining the same exclusionary racial ideologies while escaping direct references to the discredited idea of biological race (Balibar and Wallerstein 1991, Wolgast and Wolgast 2024)

Reaction to AAR

The discrepancy between the high rate of experiences of racism and the low rate of access to the police may contribute to individuals' hesitance in seeking intervention from official authorities, such as law enforcement, due to limited confidence in the effectiveness of these measures.

- * European Commission (2024) calls for more comprehensive data collection and structural analysis regarding racism, highlighting a lack of inclusion in broader research frameworks.
- * Protection remains fragmented, and the anti-racism action plan strategy itself is non-legislative and not legally binding.

[...] It is therefore important that Member States further improve the collection of equality data at all territorial levels and urge all stakeholders to cooperate in the collection of data for equality and non-discrimination purposes European Commission (2024: 15)

★ One of the adverse consequences of anti-racist mainstreaming is that policies

- are decontextualized from the lived experience of racialized peoples and promotes a 'universalized vision of equality' (Lentin 2004: 439).
- Crenshaw emphasizes that if anti-racist initiatives only articulate racism along particular dimensions, anti-racist efforts employ 'strategic silence' (Crenshaw 1991: 1253), alerting that such interventions frequently perpetuate these silences.
- * [W]ithout a detailed analysis of the role of anti-racism in contemporary societies [...] we shall not be able to understand the changing dynamics of racial ideologies and political mobilizations or the possibilities for defeating racist movements (Back and Solomos 1996: 103).

Social Movements: Counterframes

Despite facing racism, discrimination and homophobia, many individuals of Asian diaspora are empowered and actively contribute positively to society through their activism and advocacy efforts, thereby facilitating a counterframe (Suda and Köhler 2023).

Transnational counter-frames

Intersectional counter-frames

* When social movements are intersectional, we can build collective power across differences (Lee et al. 2022, 2020, Kim and Lee 2023).

U. Leipzig, AVE

* Solidarity must be reciprocal: Asian-led groups support Black-led movements and vice versa (Lee et al. 2022, 2020, Kim and Lee 2023).

Key Takeaway

- * Effective antiracism must confront not only overt acts of racism but also the cultural, policy, and institutional norms that perpetuate exclusionary practices (Goldberg 2008).
- * The anti-racist works should collaborate directly on civil society organizations from intersectional perspectives.
- * The superficial antiracist actions can unintentionally reinforce racism when they coexist with denial. In other words, saying 'I'm not racist' without acknowledging structural racism helps immunize racism against critique. That's a dissonance we see often: antiracist opinions without antiracist accountability.

Our findings suggest that while the pandemic may have acted as a trigger and exacerbated AAR, it is not the sole or ultimate cause of racism against Asians in Europe.

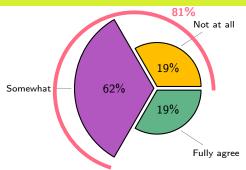

Figure 32: To what extent do you believe the racism you experienced in the last 12 months was the result of the pandemic?

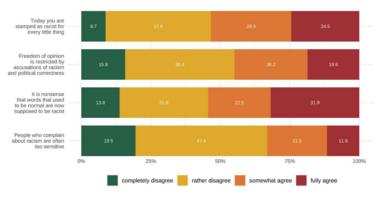

Figure 33: (Dis-)agreement with racism denial statements in Germany (N = 4.906-4.968).

* Kim and Steinhilper's (2025) racism denial index revealed that 67% of respondents expressed agreement, which underlines that the majority of the population continues to harbour defensive or dismissive attitudes towards the existence of racism.
